DANIELS ORATOR AT CHAPEL HILL

Secretary of War Delivers Address at University Day Celebration.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Chapel Hill, N. C., October 11 .- Complimenting the wisdom and foresight of the members of the Hallfax convention of 1776 that made provision for ncouragement and promotion of useful learning in one or more universities, and recognizing the fact that versities, and recognizing the fact that the University of North Carolina is largely responsible for the North Carolina thought, both of this and the next generation, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, in delivering the University Lay address to day nobeld Josephur Daniels, in delivering the University Day address to-day, upheld with native pride the North Carolina spirit as embodied in the lives of Mason, Vance and Aycock, "They are the North Carolina spirit incarnate," declared Mr. Daniels, as he defined the differentiations of the North Carolina spirit as distinguished from the spirit of other States.

President Graham said in part:
"The registration has now reached 871. This exceeds the total number ever registered in the whole of any year by thirty-four. There are over 100 more students here now than at any one time before, and this notwithstanding the fact the requirements for entrance have been rigidly enferted any one time before, and this notwithstanding the fact the requirements for entrance have been rigidly enforced;
and the fact that this year, for the first time, upper class men who failed to pass as many as nine hours have not been allowed to register. Our registration in the academic department exceeds that of any other Southern college except the University of Texas, which is coeducational. The university plant has been in active operation the whole twelve months of the year with the exception of seven weeks, and by the end of the year instruction will have been given to over 1400 students —including the 500 teachers in the summer school.

"Going to church is as voluntary as the playing of games and it is apparently a vast deal more popular. The four churches of the town have Milble classes on Sunday mornings at 10 o'clock, in which some 250 students are in attendance. The regular services which follow at the churches are filled; the Y. M. C. A. Bible classes at 12:30 have 175 in actual attendance. The association holds two week-day general meetings every week, which are largely attended—one led by a member of the faculty, and the other.

spirit as distinguished from the spirit of other States.

Felicitous in many marked features was the celebration of the 129th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the University of North Carolina. Alongside the patriotic address of Secretary Daniels were the speeches of Acting President Edward K. Graham and Dr. Archibald Henderson, both of whom reviewed the work of service and contribution to leadership and future possibilities of the University of North Carolina.

Regrets were expressed at the enforced absence of Governor Locks Craig, who was to have spoken on the topic of "The University and the State"

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.]
London, October 11.—Perhaps hypnotism has performed a miracle—made the blind to see. So claims Alexander Friskine, a relative of the Earl of Mar and Kellie, whose family name is Erskine.

He offers his hypnotic power, gratultously, to the Royal Normal College for the Blind.

Mr. Erskine, a professional hynotist for lifteen years, claims to have restored sight to two young women; one born blind, the other blinded by a blow on the head.

The girls and their grateful parents corroborate all the hypnotist's statements.
